

Dr. Atul Shah – Biography

Dr. Atul Shah grew up in India and became a physician there. When he relocated to the U.S., Dr. Shah became a physician here as well. In his studies and training, he discovered that developed countries like the U.S, Canada, the U.K., and Australia have more allergies than India and the other developing countries. This intrigued Dr. Shah. It was his curiosity about allergies combined with his desire to make a difference that led him to become an allergist. It has become Dr. Shah's mission to empower allergic individuals to understand and believe they can live great lives, allergy free.

Dr. Shah is the author of "Allergies, You Asked, We Answered" and the AmazingAllergist's Awesome book series for children. He founded the AmazingAllergist Group and is the Medical Director of the www.Center4AsthmaAllergy.com. A Board Certified Allergist, Dr. Shah has earned the honor of fellowships in both the American College of Allergy, Asthma & Immunology and the American Academy of Allergy, Asthma & Immunology.

He has personally treated more than 20,000 patients and made significant impact in more than 100,000 lives, earning the nickname the "AmazingAllergist" from his patients and peers. He has been recognized with prestigious awards including the America's Top Physicians Award, the Patients' Choice Award and the Most Compassionate Physicians' Award. Dr. Shah practices in Long Island and resides there with his family. He and his team love making a difference and support various local, national and international charities, as well as help fund the research and education in the fields of allergy, asthma, and immunology.
